From the Colorado Springs Gazette – Healed by Writing

Mystery and crime novels are wedged tightly on the shelves encircling John McKenna's work space. Stacks of similarly themed books are piled on the table, and more heaps of novels congregate downstairs. It's a bibliophile's heaven.

The 72-year-old book reviewer and award-winning author of three self-published novels spends his days with his wheelchair bellied up to the table, conveniently next to the kitchen. To his right, a thick dictionary rests on a wooden stand, flipped open to the latter half of the alphabet.

A notepad is at the ready on the table in front of him, where he can capture the ideas noodling around his storyteller's brain or his thoughts about the yarns of fellow mystery and crime fiction writers. If he doesn't have anything nice to say in a review, though, he leaves well enough alone. (Contd. Pg. 4)

The S.A. Healy Company is gradually adding ment to the skeleton crew which has operated during the winter months and many more will probably be at work next month. Two new Marion electric shovels which recently arrived at the Hurleyville Station are now being assembled at Neversink. The work of placing stones on the surface of the Lackawack Dam has been temporarily halted for lack of material. It is expected that the next supply of stone will come from a quarry near Kingston. The great slabs of rock, eighteen inches thick are "faced" but left irregular in shape, and the crevices are poured with concrete. (Contd. Pg. 3)

St. Patrick's Day Facts and Folklore: Did St. Patrick really drive the snakes out of Ireland? Probably not, since snakes weren't native to Ireland. St. Patrick's real name was Maewyn Succat. When he became a priest, his name changed to Patricius, and eventually to Patrick.

Blue was the color originally associated with St. Patrick, but green is now favored.

St. Patrick's Day is the traditional day for planting peas.

Cabbage seeds are often planted on St. Patrick's Day and old-time farmers believed that to make them grow well, you needed to plant them while wearing your night-clothes!

Old records kept in 1888, show that it was ten days after the Great Blizzard before mail came to Ladleton and then it was carried on foot. Mrs. Andrew George, who was twelve years old at that time of the Great Blizzard, remembers the storm vividly. At Slide Mountain, where she was staying with an older sister, four feet of snow fell in twenty-four hours. Thirty foot drifts piled across the Big Indian Road. It was some time before the railroad cut off by the storm could resume to Big Indian. At the end of the blizzard, there was a rain which froze. This kept the snow from melting and it was summer before the last of the drifts melted in the Branch. Food grew scarce and folks who had a big crock of salt pork and a barrel of flour were lucky. Feed and watering the stock was a big problem and sometimes it was easier to tunnel under the drifts than shovel a road through. The high winds that accompanied the Great Blizzard shifted during the storm and moved mountainous drifts from one place to another.

The Magic and the Mystery of the Shamrock

There is a bit of green everywhere! You may even have a little pot of green shamrocks sitting in your window.

Whoever knew there was such diversity of opinion as to what a real shamrock was.

Back in 1597, John Gerard, an herbalist, defined the shamrock as Trifolium pratense flore albo, meaning Red or White Clover. Then in 1726, the Irish botanist Caleb Threlkeld, wrote in his work entitled Synopsis Stirpium Hibernicarum or A Treatise on Native Irish Plants identifying the shamrock as Trifolium pratense, or White Field Clover.

In 1737 botanist Karl Linnaeus claimed the shamrock as Trifolium pratense, which is purple field clover. By 1830, London botanist James Ebenezer Bicheno added to the confusion, proclaiming that the real shamrock was indeed Oxalis acetosella or Wood Sorrel.

According to a survey taken in 1893 by Nathaniel Colgan, an amateur naturalist the results were that there was no 'true' species of shamrock. Almost one hundred years later, in 1988 a comparable survey was carried out by E. Charles Nelson, Director of the Irish National Botanic Gardens. Both surveys involved, asked people from all across Ireland to send in samples of a shamrock, which were then potted up and allowed to flower so that their botanical species could be identified. The results of both surveys were very similar, showing that the conception of the shamrock in Ireland had changed little in almost a hundred years; there is no one "true" species of shamrock.

The Trifolium dubium (Lesser clover) is considered to be the shamrock by roughly half of Irish people, and Trifolium repens (White clover) by another third, with the remainder split between Trifolium pratense, Medicago lupulina, Oxalis acetosella and various other species of Trifolium and oxalis.

The little potted shamrock plants that you have seen in the shops are probably none of those mentioned above, but are most likely wood sorrel that is shipped from Ireland in great quantity for St. Patrick's Day. But, they are green and look like a shamrock, so to us, they must be shamrocks!

Shamrocks have been symbolic of many things over the years. According to legend, the shamrock was a sacred plant to the Druids of Ireland because its leaves formed a triad, and three was a mystical number in the Celtic religion. St. Patrick used the shamrock in the 5th century to illustrate the doctrine of the Holy Trinity as he introduced Christianity to Ireland.

The shamrock became symbolic in other ways as time went on. In the 19th century it became a symbol of rebellion, and anyone wearing it risked death by hanging. It was this period that spawned the phrase "the wearin' o' the green".

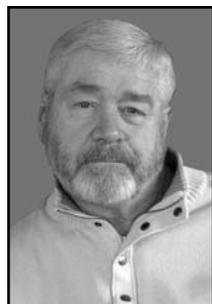

Today, the shamrock is the most recognized symbol of the Irish, especially on St. Patrick's Day. And the magic of the shamrock - when you put one on - you simply become Irish for the day!

And begorrah - that's a truth we can rely on!

Happy St. Patrick's Day!

The Night Agent

Mysterious Book Report No. 366

by John Dwaine McKenna

To all of our readers out there in newslandia, bookreviewburg, or elsewhere, lost somewhere in the electronic haze, who think that all the great spy and thriller novels ended with the deaths of Robert Ludlum and Tom Clancy . . . they didn't. And, if you think you'll just have to be satisfied with those cloned copies, written by second-rate writers 'licensed by the estate of,' and pimped by the publishers in hopes of squeezing a few more bucks out of the old cash cow . . . you don't. There's a ton of great new talent out there, and this week's MBR features one of the best of that new breed. His name is Matthew Quirk, and his latest work, The Night Agent, (William Morrow/Harper Collins, $26.99, 422 pages, ISBN 978-0-06-287546-4) is an all-out, full throttle thrill ride from the first sentence on the first page. It's drawn rave reviews from the likes of Michael Connelly, Lee Child and Michael Koryta, as well as a bevy of other A-list authors.

As the novel begins, we meet FBI Agent Peter Sutherland who, much to his own surprise, interviews for a position in the White House and gets it in spite of the misgivings of all those he works with. That's because his father, who also worked for the US Government was suspected of selling secrets to the Russians . . . an allegation which cost him everything, including his life. It's a family shame Peter has spent his entire life trying to live down by always being squeaky clean in everything he says and does. Now, he's working at the very heart of the seat of government in the Situation Room at the White House, just steps away from the President of the United States. Peter's job – sitting next to a telephone all night long and waiting for it to ring, which it's only done once in the past year. When it does ring, his job is to get a code phrase and message from the caller and pass it on to two people . . . both of whom talk directly to POTUS.

Then a call comes in at 1:05am from a terrified young woman named Rose. Her aunt and uncle have just been killed. She's hiding in a closet and the shooter is still in the house hunting for her. Her uncle gave her the code and the number, along with the message, "Tell them that OSPREY was right. It's happening . . ." then the phone goes silent, thrusting Peter Sutherland into the heart of a conspiracy that reaches to the highest levels of government. It's diplomacy by other means, as the intrigue swirls, the assassinations continue unchecked, and the tension mounts higher with every page. The Night Agent, despite its innocent sounding title, is the one thriller you don't want to miss, because the plot could have been ripped right out of today's headlines. It's one helluva yarn!

Like the review . . . let your friends know, You saw it in the Mysterious Book Report . . . The greatest compliment you can give, is to like us and share it with others on Facebook. Follow us on Facebook, Twitter, Goodreads, Instagram.

From the Colorado Springs Gazette – Healed by Writing

(From Pg. 1) "I got drawn to it," McKenna said about the genre. "There are endless ways to do the dirty, and it also branches out into thriller and spy fiction, so we do all of those. Within 50 pages, I know if I like it or not. There are so many good books and authors struggling and trying to get a little traction. I tend to write reviews of first and second novels, because let's face it, George Pelecanos and James Lee Burke don't need my help."

His makeshift office is a cozy oasis on this frostbitten, cloudy December afternoon, but the laughter and camaraderie of McKenna, his wife of 42 years, June, and his assistant, Lora Brown, sparkle up the space.

As grateful as he is for it now, this is not the life he planned, if one can ever be said to plan a life.

After relaxing in a post-dinner haze almost 19 years ago, on Feb. 18, 2000, John stood and pitched forward on his face. He lay on the floor, his right side paralyzed, but told June not to call 911, that the numbness would dissipate. Hours later, when it hadn't, June overrode his wishes and called for help.

"I was a total wreck," she said. "When I called 911, they said, 'Lock up the animals, and get his medications out.' I locked our two cats in the basement, and we went to the hospital. I remembered two days later, I've still got cats in the basement, and had to call the neighbors to let them out."

He'd been at the doctor's office that day due to back pain and was told he had slippage in his cervical spine and needed an operation. John deferred, saying he'd do it as a last resort. Now life had made the decision for him.

"They (doctors) never say you can't walk again; they say you may not," said John. "The first time I peeked over a doctor's shoulder and saw the word quadriplegic, I almost had a nervous breakdown. I went through eight or 10 years of feeling sorry for myself. Feeling pissed off. You go through stages of things."

"Stages of grief," added June.

At the time, John owned an antiques shop near Old Colorado City. Before that, he'd worked in securities as an investment adviser and compliance officer. He hadn't cultivated a writing career, though he had written some articles for a business magazine and a newsletter for his store.

"I kept my hand in a little but never thought about writing fiction," he said. "I had to come up with something to fill in the blanks."

First, though, he had to get over the rage and anguish over the new body he inhabited.

"I had to get my attitude readjusted," he said. "And you have to find a reason to live."

With a dented spinal cord, his actual diagnosis was incomplete quadriplegia, which presented as limited movement in his limbs.

"This all happened to me at such a late age," said John, who was 53 at the time. "I have really worked hard at not playing the poor pitiful me thing."

He turned to reading, a longtime hobby, to escape reality.

"I didn't want to face myself," he said. "I still don't like looking in mirrors. Still don't like seeing myself in photos. I see how wadded up I am."

Eventually, the urge grew to do more than read. In 2011, he reached out to the Tri-Valley Townsman, the weekly newspaper in his hometown of Grahamsville, N.Y., and piqued interest with an offer of book reviews. Those still run weekly and are also featured on his website, mysteriousbookreport.com.

"The Neversink Chronicles: Stories," a book of short stories set in 1930s upstate New York, kicked off his fiction writing in 2011. It was the first book published by his own Rhyolite Press, and it won best book of the year from the Colorado Independent Publishers Association. Due to health issues, he since has given up the press to his business partner.

His second, "The Whim-Wham Man," also published by Rhyolite, won silver for mystery and crime fiction from the CIPA. His third and latest, "Colorado Noir," a collection of short stories based in the Pikes Peak region, was published by Rhyolite in 2014 and also won silver for mystery and crime fiction from the CIPA.

That collection caught the eye of an agent in New York City, who asked him to create a novel out of the book's last story. Though that book is at a standstill for the moment, it didn't stop John from grinding away at another novel, "Unforsaken," a murder mystery set in the Old West. It will be published by Rhyolite and launched April 6 at Hooked on Books downtown.

Though he had spent years in rage and anguish, he harbored a sliver of hope.

"I always thought I was going to walk again," said John. "Surgeons tell you each of these injuries is different because we're all different. Others recover and walk; others don't."

Even now, he does physical therapy multiple times every week with June, Brown and another caregiver who comes to the house. His spirits are good, though he has some of the aches and pains of an aging body. What's kept him going all these years is simple.

"June. And work. I hope that I kept her going, too. I think love and respect helped both of us. I wanted to do something that made both of us feel worthwhile. You can't get one of these injuries and sit in the corner or drink all day."

His refusal to give up and determination to develop a new Purpose keep him perched at the table, writing, reading and bantering with June and Brown about books and life.

"I want to be an example for others," he said, "that life doesn't end unless you want it to. I say a little thank you every day when I wake up, that I have another chance and another day and I can try to do something good. With June and Lora's help, I've been able to accomplish that. I may not be a Stephen King or C.J. Box or James Lee Burke, but I have four or five books in the Library of Congress."

Mountain Rescue Association (MRA) recently Hosted an Evaluation Process

Mountain Rescue Association (MRA) training: Forest Rangers recently hosted an evaluation process for Mountain Rescue Association (MRA) teams of the Appalachian Region. Forest Rangers and Appalachian Mountain Rescue

(NC) team members and Neil Van Dyke of the State of Vermont's Division of Public Safety/State Police assisted in the evaluation. The teams evaluated were: Stowe Mountain Rescue (VT); Allegheny Mountain Rescue (PA); and New Jersey Search and Rescue (NJ). MRA

Teams are required to pass an evaluation every three years in wild land search skills and technical rescue skills in a four-season environment. All teams were tested and passed a technical evacuation from a high-angle, ice-filled gully, as well as a steep angle snow evacuation of an injured subject. Each team is scrutinized on details ranging from general mountaineering skills to patient care. On the second day, wild land search skills were tested with both a tabletop exercise and a lost person scenario. These evaluations keep each team on the same level across North America and provide for better partnerships and increased public safety.

The Olive Jar - By Carol LaMonda

The Next Best Thing

"The world is moving so fast these days that the man who says it can't be done is generally interrupted by someone doing it."
- Elbert Hubbard

Who would have thought we would all be carrying around little devices that replace our calculator, flashlight, watch, alarm clock, television, telephone, fax machine, set of encyclopedias, and atlas? Back when I graduated college and decided to set the world afire with my knowledge and abilities, little did I realize that the world I had studied was not the world in which I would live and work.

Since I am a dinosaur from the twentieth century that saw electricity and travel transform our lives, I can only imagine what the next best thing will be. What will our grandchildren experience as society transforms and technology progresses (or regresses)?

I predict that all people will get "chipped" with information and location. We will have an annual Programming sort of like we get an annual physical or yearly inspection for our cars.

Our iPhones will be flexible so they can fit in our pockets or purses or be worn out of sight. They will also become projection devices to replace our televisions. Cable and wifi will become obsolete and we will all pay a monthly communication bill to the satellite company that charges for "hot spots."

Solar roofs on houses and cars will cut down on fossil fuels, and solar collectors will power lighting devices both indoors and out.

Fast track hover trains and convoys of delivery trucks will look remarkable similar with self driving cars using designated super highways connecting to a computerized grid system that allows us to branch out to existing roads we can navigate with drivers.

Packaging will be edible for livestock, and composting will provide sustainable home gardens.

It is hard to predict the future. It will be some variation of what is combined with what can be. As a painter, I know there are only three primary colors, but what an array of hues can be made by tweaking and mixing what is to create a new vibrant shade of purple or persimmon. The future is like that.

As Albert Einstein once said, "The true sign of intelligence is not knowledge but imagination."

Natalia Zukerman's 'The Women Who Rode Away' at DVAA's Salon Series

The Delaware Valley Arts Alliance's winter Salon Series continues on Saturday, March 16 at 2pm with Natalia Zukerman's "The Women Who Rode Away," a performance that melds the talents of the songwriter, painter, and storyteller into an afternoon of reflection and perseverance. Featuring original music and projected paintings, this intimate portrait recounts the artist's journey of finding her own voice through the stories of the women in her life that paved the way. Accompanied by her guitar, Zukerman uses song, monologue and her own works of art to present glimpses into her own life, her family's life, and her ancestors' lives. The production is directed by Kira Simring and features projection design by Gertjan Houben.

"The show is songs, paintings and stories about women who were and are architects of their own lives; who defy categorization," says Zukerman. "Through these portraits and stories, I'm finding my way to tell my own stories. These women have been the guides for me and I hope in the re-telling, that the audience walks away with a sense of strength and a permission to be exactly who they are."

Musician, painter, and educator Natalia Zukerman grew up in New York City. Having released seven independent albums on Weasel Records and her own label Talisman Records, Zukerman has toured internationally as a solo performer since 2005. She has also accompanied and opened for some of acoustic music's greats such as Erin McKeown, Shawn Colvin, and Ani DiFranco, and many others.

March marks Women's History Month, an opportunity to celebrate and elevate the voices of women both known and under recognized.

DVAA is located at 37 Main Street, Narrowsburg, NY, and the event will take place at 2pm on the second floor in the intimate Krause Recital Hall. Admission is free, and donations are appreciated. Seating is limited and available on a first-come, first-serve basis. Schedule is subject to change due to weather and circumstances beyond our control. Please call ahead to confirm each event. More information is available by calling 845-252-7576 or visiting DVAA's website, delawarevalleyartsalliance.org.

The Salon Series continues on Saturday, March 23, with "Roald Dahl's Villains on Trial" moderated by One Grand Books founder Aaron Hicklin.

The activities of the Delaware Valley Arts Alliance are made possible in part by a grant from the New York State Council on the Arts with the support of Governor Andrew Cuomo and the New York State Legislature.

State Parks, DEC, and State Police Remind Snowmobilers to Refrain from Alcohol Use While on the Trails

Snowmobiling While Intoxicated (SWI) is a Serious Crime That Puts the Public at Risk

The New York State Office of Parks, Recreation and Historic Preservation (OPRHP), Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC), and New York State Police would like to remind snowmobilers to never drink and drive, and to ride responsibly while enjoying the state's abundant snowmobile trails.

"Alcohol use and imprudent speed are the most common factors behind snowmobile crashes," State Parks Acting Commissioner Erik Kulleseid said. "We urge snowmobilers to avoid alcohol, drive within your abilities, within speed limits, and to reduce speeds during inclement or nighttime operation. Knowing and following safety recommendations will help ensure that you and your friends and family will have a great time on the trail."

"New York State has some of the most spectacular snowmobiling opportunities in the nation. But a great day on the trails can turn deadly with just one bad choice," Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) Commissioner Basil Seggos said. "We are urging our snowmobile enthusiasts to never drink alcohol when traveling the trails. Save a life, and save the drinks for the end of the day."

"We want snowmobile enthusiasts to take advantage of the beautiful trails in our great State of New York, but we want them to do so safely," said Acting State Police Superintendent Keith M. Corlett. "There is no excuse for operating any motorized vehicle or device while impaired whether it be a vehicle, snowmobile, boat or ATV. By making responsible and common sense choices, New Yorkers can do their part to keep our trails safe and enjoyable for all."

In New York, a snowmobile driver can be charged with Snowmobiling While Intoxicated (SWI) if he or she operates a vehicle under the influence of alcohol. Any snowmobile driver with a Blood Alcohol Content (BAC) of 0.08 percent or higher can be charged with an SWI, the snowmobile equivalent of a Driving While Intoxicated (DWI) offense. A misdemeanor conviction can result in a permanent criminal record, a maximum fine of $1500, up to 90 days in jail, and a 12-month suspension of snowmobiling privileges. Intoxication can be proven through different types of evidence including BAC chemical tests (breath, blood, or urine), law enforcement's observations, and other factors. An SWI charge is upgraded to a felony when there are two prior convictions.

Also, a snowmobile driver can be charged with Snowmobiling While Ability Impaired (SWAI). The penalty for a SWAI conviction can include a fine up to $350, jail time up to 15 days, and a suspension of snowmobile privileges for six months. A second type of SWAI charge involves driving a snowmobile while under the influence of drugs. Similar to a DWAI-Drugs, the SWAI-Drugs charge is a misdemeanor offense that can be brought against any snowmobiler who operates the vehicle while on drugs. If convicted, an SWAI-Drugs charge can bring harsh penalties, including a fine up to $500, jail time up to 90 days, and a one-year suspension of your snowmobile registration and privileges. Everyone operating a snowmobile should be familiar with safe riding practices and all applicable laws, rules and regulations. The best way to learn is by taking a snowmobile safety course. To find a course, visit the Parks website. Before deciding to head out, riders are also reminded to check trail conditions with local snowmobile clubs. To find a club, visit the New York State Snowmobile Association (NYSSA) website.

Top safety recommendations include:

- o Be aware that fluctuating weather late in the season can quickly result in unsafe conditions - including blow downs, low hanging branches, water hazards, ice, washouts and exposed hazards due to minimal snow coverage.
- o Check over your snowmobile; make sure it is in good working order and carry emergency supplies.
- o Always wear a helmet and make sure you wear the proper snowmobile-riding gear including bibs, jackets, boots and gloves.
- o Always ride with a buddy or at least one other person.
- o Ride responsibly. Ride within your ability, ride to the right and operate at a safe and prudent speed at all times. Respect landowners, obey posted signs and stay on the marked trail.
- o Frozen bodies of water are not designated trails; if you plan to ride on ice, proceed with caution and be aware of potential hazards under the snow as well as ice thickness.
- o Four inches of ice is usually safe for accessing ice on foot. Double that thickness for traveling on white ice. Ice thickness can vary on every body of water or even within the same body of water. The presence of snowmobile tracks or footprints on the ice should not be considered evidence of safe ice conditions. Individuals are strongly encouraged to check ice conditions and avoid situations that appear to present even a remote risk. Testing the thickness of ice can be done with an auger or ice spud at various spots.
- o Never drink alcohol or use drugs and ride. State Park and DEC Police will continue patrolling and issuing tickets for snowmobiling violations - including snowmobiling while intoxicated, imprudent speed, reckless operation and driving unregistered snowmobiles.

OPRHP oversees the development, maintenance and oversight of a statewide snowmobile program, which features approximately 10,400 miles of state-designated snowmobile trails.

For more information on snowmobiling in New York, visit the Parks website.

DEC Accepting Applications for 16th Annual Environmental Excellence Awards

The New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) is now accepting applications for the 2019 Environmental Excellence Awards program, DEC Commissioner Basil Seggos announced today. The Environmental Excellence Awards recognize businesses, institutions, municipalities, and organizations for outstanding commitments to environmental sustainability, social responsibility, and economic viability. To date, New York has honored 92 committed organizations that are leading by example and inspiring their industries and communities.

"Under Governor Cuomo's leadership, New York is making our environment a priority and leading the nation to ensure our natural resources are protected and developing innovative new tools are utilized to better preserve our environment for generations to come," Commissioner Seggos said. "We are proud to partner with and celebrate these organizations and businesses that are making better use of irreplaceable natural resources and helping communities adapt to our changing climate. These green leaders are setting the standard for others across New York State and the country."

Businesses (i.e., small, medium, and large businesses, manufacturing, power generation, retail, agri-business, renewable energy, hospitality, sports, etc.); not-for-profit organizations; academic, health care, and recreational facilities; individuals; and local, state, federal, and Indian Nation government agencies are all eligible to apply. DEC is encouraging organizations that are implementing innovative approaches and technologies, advancing sustainable practices, generating economic growth, harnessing the power of creative partnerships, and achieving extraordinary outcomes to apply. Competitive applications will focus on projects or programs resulting in significant environmental benefits by:

- o reducing greenhouse gas emissions;
- o helping adapt to climate change;
- o reducing food waste or encouraging recycling and composting programs;
- o developing "green tech" solutions;
- o implementing initiatives to "green" businesses, farms, schools, recreational, sports, health care, and hospitality facilities;
- o supporting clean energy and green infrastructure projects;
- o developing creative natural resource/habitat protection or restoration efforts;
- o improving energy efficiency;
- o implementing sustainable education and training programs;
- o improving manufacturing processes; and
- o supporting creative urban forestry or farming practices, including programs to advance "farm to table."

Completed applications for the 2019 awards must be submitted by Wednesday, April 17, 2019. Winners will be honored at an awards ceremony in November. At that time, winners will have an opportunity to present and display information about their award-winning project or program.

Since the program began in 2004, award winners have had positive impacts on New York's economy and have contributed to impressive improvements of New York's environment such as:

- o reducing or eliminating more than 174,000 metric tons of CO2 and other greenhouse gas emissions;

- o producing at least 1.4 million kilowatt hours of electricity from solar installations and saving 214 million kilowatt hours of electricity;
 - o reducing the use of petroleum products by more than 12 million gallons;
 - o reducing water consumption by more than 90 million gallons;
 - o capturing at least 46 million gallons of stormwater;
 - o diverting nearly 350,000 tons of waste from landfills, including more than 2 tons of pharmaceutical waste and 6 tons of batteries annually;
 - o composting nearly 224,000 tons of organic material;
 - o eliminating the use of at least 400,000 single-use plastic shopping bags;
 - o preserving thousands of acres of open space; planting thousands of trees; protecting sensitive and critical habitats; and improving the health of lakes, ponds, and other water resources;
 - o engaging millions of adults and students in sustainable practices at home, work, school while recreating or attending a sporting event; and
 - o generating more than $2.5 million in revenue from transforming waste into opportunities by diverting reusable materials from the landfill.
- Benefits of receiving an award include visibility as a sector leader and advancing an organization's mission through networking and marketing opportunities.

Information about the award program and the 2019 application materials can be found on the DEC website, or email request to awards@dec.ny.gov, or in writing to the NYS Department of Environmental Conservation, Pollution Prevention Unit, 625 Broadway, 9th Floor, Albany, New York 12233-7253 or by phone to DEC's Pollution Prevention Unit at (518) 402-8706. Applications accepted through April 17, 2019.

Read Across America Day is Another Huge Success at Tri-Valley

Proud TVTA members get ready for the day.

On Thursday, February 28, the Tri-Valley Teachers' Association (TVTA), Tri-Valley Essential Support Staff Association (TESSA), and the Tri-Valley Administrative Association sponsored a Read Across America day at Tri-Valley Central School.

During the school day during their lunch periods, all students in grades 7-12 were invited to come to the library to enjoy refreshments and pick out a free book. Hundreds of books were given away to grateful students. Later that night, all parents and students in grades PK-6 were invited back to the school for "Dinner and Story." Students in the Family, Career and Community Leaders of America (FCCLA) club, teachers, support staff members, administrators, and Board of Education members served families a free spaghetti dinner. After the dinner, each family headed to the library to pick out a free book. Upon choosing their book, families then headed upstairs to the "reading room" to spend some quality time reading together.

Overall, the event was a huge success. Hundreds of books were given away and approximately 200 dinners were served. The TVTA, TESSA, and TVAA unions would like to thank everyone for all of their support. They would also like to thank the New York State United Teachers (NYSUT) and the First Book organization, both who were instrumental in helping the TVTA obtain the books.

Frost Valley YMCA Announces New Picture This Day Camp

Claryville - There may be snow on the ground, but now is the perfect time to plan for summer camp. Frost Valley YMCA has added to its summer lineup a new photography day camp for children entering grades 4th-5th called Picture This.

Picture This will nurture children's enthusiasm for taking pictures and exploring the world through an artist's lens. Campers will learn how to take nature, still life, and action shots. Prior photography experience is not necessary. All supplies including Canon Powershot cameras will be provided, and campers will take home their best photo at the end of the week.

"We want campers to go out into nature with a camera in their hand and take photos of things that they find beautiful," says Jessie Emmons, Director of Community Programs for Frost Valley. "They will be rediscovering the world through their camera lens."

While photography is the highlight of the program, campers will also have time each day that is dedicated to traditional camp activities. They will enjoy climbing, sports and games, swimming, boating, arts and crafts, and more!

Frost Valley's Day Camp registration for this and dozens of other programs is now open and financial aid applications are available. Visit FrostValley.org to see all the new programs. Parents looking to give their child a positive, safe, and exciting summer camp experience are encouraged to register right away. To register your child for day camp, call 845-985-2291 or email registrar@frostvalley.org.

Schools Collaborate to Put on Mock Town Hall

(From Pg. 1) In preparation for the event, students from both schools learned a great deal about our local history with the reservoirs in their English, social studies, science, and agriculture classes. After learning about the history, all participating students were assigned to argue from the perspective of one of four different stakeholder groups: Catskill residents, New York City residents, New York City government officials, or workers of the reservoirs. They did further research to find evidence to support their arguments for their specific group.

On Thursday morning, Columbia Secondary School came to Tri-Valley. Eighth grade students were mixed in their groups (half from one school, half from the other) and had the first part of the morning to meet in their groups and plan out their arguments. This also gave students time to get to know each other.

During the Town Hall, students debated back and forth about the issues concerning the building of the reservoirs. The New York City residents and government talked about the desperate need for clean water. The Catskill residents focused their arguments on the unfairness of it all-how they had to give up their livelihood and not receive adequate compensation in return. The workers talked about their lack of safety on the job and their need for more rights.

All points and arguments were heard by the moderator of the event-Director of Public Affairs for New York City Environment Protection and Bureau of Water Supply, Adam Bosch, as well as a panel of esteemed guests: Dick Coombe, local resident and President of the Time and the Valleys Museum Board; Susan Cox, US Forest Service; Diane Galusha, published author of Liquid Assets and Communications Director/Education Coordinator at Catskill Watershed Corporation; Jen Garigliano, Chief of Staff, NYC Department of Environmental Protection; Sean McAndrew, DEP Water for the Future Director; Dave Pulley, Tri-Valley Secondary School Principal; Tyler Van Fleet, Forestry Program Watershed Educator; and Mike Williams, Tri-Valley Superintendent. At the conclusion of the Town Hall, the panel gave feedback to the students about their arguments.

After the event, all students, teachers, and panel members had time to sit down and eat lunch together. The lunch was catered by the Sullivan County BOCES culinary program students under the direction of instructor and local resident Kathy Poppo. The lunch was also a huge success, as it gave everyone more time to get to know each other.

This Mock Town Hall was organized through the collaboration of Meredith Hill, Assistant Principal at Columbia Secondary School, and Matt Haynes, 8th grade ELA teacher at Tri-Valley. This is the fourth consecutive year the two schools have partnered to participate in the Mock Town Hall.

This hugely successful event allowed students to learn about our local history, meet other students from a different area and school, and practice their public speaking and debate skills. As is the case with many events in our community, it could not have happened without the hard work of everyone involved: students, teachers, staff, administrators, community members, and parents.

The smiling face synonymous with the Catskill Fly Fishing Center & Museum, and the man behind Catskill Flies will officially be named Catskill Legends April 13.

Dennis Skarka

Tables can be purchased for $500. There will be raffles and auctions.

Since the inception of the museum, Agnes has been part of it. She's still making her jam which can still be purchased at the gift shop, and her soups warm those who brave the early spring cold for the CFFCM's first cast each April.

"Every special event we have is greeted by the question, 'Will Agnes be there?' when people RSVP," CFFCM Managing Director John Kovach said.

Dennis Skarka, from his downtown Roscoe store Catskill Flies, was a go-to source for information on where the big trout were and what they were eating. He died Feb. 3, 2019 but the Catskill Flies will live on.

Tickets to the 2019 CFFCM Legends Dinner can be purchased at www.cffcm.com

The Scene Too

By Jane Harrison

There are a few towns or villages in Sullivan County that are actually working at making a come back by welcoming new settlers and new businesses catering to these new arrivals. Livingston Manor seems to be one of these towns. I had heard there was a resurgence of life coming into the town, so I took a ride. The first business I saw was a wine shop...and a fairly busy wine shop even at 2 in the afternoon, young adults and adults, much the same as I had seen at the Catskill Brewery, also Livingston Manor, a few weeks before.

The Catskill Arts Society has been a staple there since 2007 when it moved from the building it shared with the Sullivan County Museum to its present location at 48 Main Street. Of course I had to visit. There were three artists showing. Theresa Hackett uses multi mediums in her paintings, not the least is a tempera or tempera like paint, much the same as we used in grade school. What makes her work truly interesting is the working of the paints and materials producing a weathered look that is ultimately comforting. Dale Emmart's Nocturne series, evoked for me dark night clouds with flashes of brilliant reds and oranges, similar to what I've seen in Florida. His inspiration, however, smoke billowing from smoke stacks and burn barrels. But that's the beauty of art, that the viewer can see whatever speaks to them personally. This hold true with the third exhibit. The poetry of writer Mermer Blakeslee so spoke to Margot McLean that pen and ink drawings came forth. I like pen and ink drawings, personally, since I can draw about as well as I can sing. The McLean drawings are powerful, wonderful, mesmerizing pieces...which prompted me to then read the poetry, which I found also worthy of the same three descriptions.

Another 'must see' there is Main Street Farm, Market and Café at 36 Main Street which has been advertised in almost everything in print I've seen, and carries a great deal of gluten free, local products, and organics. Can the area support a store like this? Let me just say that in the five minutes it took to eat my gluten free donut, I saw five, possibly six people come in specifically to purchase. So yes, I would say so. They have done their homework on the new demographics.

And then it was off to the Pickled Owl for dinner and whatever musical offering they had. What I got was David Milner. How in Heaven's name have I not see this gem of a performer before? I'm positive that he toned down, because it IS the Pickled Owl, but his last set was ultimate fun. When things go wrong in a performance (equipment failure, strings breaking, etc) one can call it a night (which I've seen) or, make it work. And David certainly did the latter, which was impressive. Also impressive was the incredible array of different artists he covered. Most solo performers pick songs in the same vein, but not this man. I'll be letting you know when he's performing again. He's definitely on my 'must see' list.

I had photos from this, but my phone is MIA. Can't find it anywhere. SOOOooooo...

Until next time, here's what's coming up this week

Wednesday: Open Studio at Fiber On Main, 227 Main Street, Hurleyville. Bring your knitting and crocheting projects (or weaving or spinning) and join this light hearted bunch of like minded people. 4pm-7pm

Friday: ACCOUSTIC ANYMOUS; Cabernet Frank's, 38 Main Street, Parksville. 7:30pm

Two Exhibits Open at DVAA

"Before the Echo," an exhibition of photography by Lisa DiLillo, and "Branches, Rocks, and String," an installation of sculpture by Eric Baylin, open at Delaware Valley Arts Alliance, 37 Main St, Narrowsburg, NY on Saturday, March 30, with a reception from 3 to 5 pm. The shows will be on view through May 4. On Saturday, April 20 at 2 pm, DiLillo and Baylin will lead a discussion about the work in the exhibits. The talk is free and open to the public.

LISA DILILLO IN ALLIANCE GALLERY
"I have always been inspired by the beauty and mystery of nature," DiLillo says. "Since moving up to the Upper Delaware Valley area it has been the sole subject of my work."

The exhibition is comprised of photographs that are reimagined landscapes created by introducing various sources of illumination such as smoke, sparks, and fireworks into rural settings. These ephemeral elements were shot in the woods at night throughout the year. DiLillo is interested in discovering underlying visual potential using light, the very essence of the photographic process.

The photographs capture liminal states and reference invisible processes where entities come into being, change form, or disintegrate. These lightscapes emerge from the shroud of the canopy in unpredictable ways. As a result, the work is a process of chance and discovery. This unpredictability mirrors the volatility of nature itself, and foreshadows unexpected environmental transformations on our horizon.

DiLillo earned her B.A. at Parsons School of Design and has lived in New York City and Sparrowbush, NY. DiLillo's videos have been exhibited widely in such venues and festivals as Reina Sofia National Museum of Art in Madrid, Memling

Eric Baylin in Loft Gallery

"For nearly two decades I have been interested in making sculpture using natural materials that I find mostly in the woods surrounding my home in North Branch, NY," says Baylin who often selects long forsythia branches and rocks plucked from creek beds for his work. "I was first inspired by fallen branches that were snagged by others on descent, then left to dangle out of place, newly configured: instant sculpture in the woods."

Baylin divides his time between North Branch, where he has had a home for more than 20 years, and Brooklyn where he teaches high school art at Packer Collegiate Institute. He graduated from the San Francisco Art Institute with a degree in painting and also received an MFA from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, at which time his work re-emerged into three dimensions, his first real interest in art. He has continued to make sculpture since then.

"I spend my time combing the woods in search of the interesting turn or twist in a branch. Then I spend hours combining and re-combining the branches, angling the string, shifting the rocks," says Baylin. "The more I insert myself into the process, the less pleased I am with the results. If the branches start to depict or overly suggest a person or thing, I start again."

Baylin has exhibited in various shows throughout Sullivan County. His work is included in the collections at the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh, NC and the Greenville Museum of Art in Greenville, NC, as well as in numerous private collections.

Delaware Valley Arts Alliance is located at 37 Main Street, Narrowsburg, NY. Hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 am - 5 pm. The activities of the Delaware Valley Arts Alliance are made possible in part by a grant from the New York State Council on the Arts with the support of Governor Andrew Cuomo and the New York State Legislature.

Rep. Antonio Delgado Announces 19th Congressional District Agriculture Advisory Committee Committee includes 40 farmers and agriculture leaders from every county in the district

U.S. Representative Antonio Delgado (NY-19) announced the creation of his 19th Congressional District Agriculture Advisory Committee, including farmers and agriculture leaders from every county in the district. The 40 members of the group will provide input to Delgado on ways that Congress can better support small farms in Upstate New York.

"All over our district we've got small, local farms that are so vital to our way of life in Upstate and to our economy. I'm looking forward to working with the Advisory Committee to prioritize small and mid-tier family-owned farms who are too often marginalized by Congress," Delgado said. "The best ideas on how we can empower farmers come not from Washington but from those who actually live and breathe these issues every day in our district. We can't work through solutions to the challenges that family farms are facing without conversations like the ones I'll be having with this Advisory Committee at the local level."

The 19th Congressional District is the eighth most rural district in the country and the third most rural district represented by a Democrat. There are over 5,000 farms and over 8,000 farm operations in the district. Delgado focused his first in-district work period on touring farms and sitting down with local farmers to hear about localized infrastructure, technology needs, and sustainable farming practices.

Agriculture Advisory Committee members praised the creation of the board and discussed what they intend to work on with Delgado. "It's refreshing to hear the congressman talk about bipartisanship and working hard to get the job done. It's a breath of fresh air," said Ray Cullen, Ulster County Farm Bureau President and owner of Green Heron Farm. "The farming community is looking forward to working together on finding solutions to problems like H2-A reform, which is an incredibly important issue for our fruit and vegetable farmers in the Hudson Valley who rely on seasonal labor."

"Agriculture is central to our history, culture and livelihoods in the Mohawk Valley," said Jason R. Evans, SUNY Cobleskill professor and director of the Institute for Rural Vitality. "There are real opportunities now for reshaping the regional agricultural economy and making it more robust for future generations of farm and food entrepreneurs. But, there are also complex challenges, and policy will undoubtedly play a role in understanding and overcoming those. I am honored to be part of Congressman Delgado's Agriculture Advisory Committee and look forward to the important work ahead."

"I am excited to be part of Congressman Delgado's Agriculture Advisory team, and I am looking forward to working with him and his staff in trying to solve agriculture and dairy issues in New York 19," said Duane Martin, dairy farmer and President of Delaware County Farm Bureau.

"We appreciate that newly elected Congressman Delgado reached out to farmers and other agricultural stakeholders in the district to meet with him on a regular basis. Agriculture is at the center of the Upstate economy. It's important that our elected officials, regardless of party, pay close attention to realities on the ground and what's at stake for farmers in the district. We hope that regular dialogue with the Committee will better equip him to address needs," said Phoebe Schreiner, Executive Director of the Center for Agricultural Development and Entrepreneurship (CADE).

"It is very exciting that Congressman Delgado has identified agriculture as a high priority in his district," said Bernadine Wiesen, Executive Director of Cornell Cooperative Extension (CCE) of Rensselaer County. "Keeping the agriculture industry healthy is critical for the well-being of ALL residents. I look forward to the formation of this committee and working together to strengthen our agriculture industry."

Bill to Ban Campaign Contributions from Companies Seeking State Contracts Passes Senate

Senator Jen Metzger (SD-42) Co-sponsored the Bill and Calls for Further Action

A bill co-sponsored by State Senator Jen Metzger banning campaign contributions from companies seeking state contracts (S3167) unanimously passed the State Senate.

The bill, introduced by Senator Zellnor Myrie (SD-20), would also impose a "restricted vendor contribution period" barring prospective vendors from making campaign contributions for a period of 6-months both before and after contracts are awarded. The ban would apply to officeholders with authority over the procurement process.

"New York's system of campaign finance reform has had an incredibly corrosive effect on our state's democratic institutions," said Senator Jen Metzger (SD-42), during the legislative session. "The legislation we pass today is an important step forward in ending this pay-to-play system. We have more work to do, but we are well on our way." Senator Metzger has sponsored a bill that would ban corporate donations entirely (S1013), a bill she hopes to see passed before the end of the year.

Another important piece of legislation that passed the Senate today, introduced by Senator Brian Kavanagh, requires that the occupation and employer of a campaign contributor be included as part of campaign filing requirements. This will bring much-needed transparency with regard to donors representing corporate interests that are filing as individual contributors.

Jen Metzger represents the 42nd Senate District, which includes all of Sullivan County and parts of Delaware, Orange, and Ulster Counties. Senator Metzger serves as Chair of the Agriculture Committee and sits on the Environmental Conservation, Education, Health, Energy and Telecommunications, and Local Government Committees.

After a three-month hiatus from our very popular thrift ministry, we look forward to seeing many of you on March 16th for the first sale of the 2019 season!

During the break, we discussed needed changes that will allow us to continue to provide this valuable service. As a community we will need to work together to make this a worthwhile ministry. We are not accepting the following:

- Cracked or chipped dishes, pottery, or glassware
- Dirty, torn, or stained clothing (these items can be left in the textile recycling containers near the Tri-Valley School administrative building)
- Personalized items of any kind, including clothing
- Furniture
- Car seats and cribs
- Books
- Electronics
- Stuffed animals

We will continue to gratefully accept donations of clean clothing, housewares, and other useful items in good condition. Beginning March 1st, if you have donations please call one of the following staff to set up a drop-off time that is convenient for you:

rehabilitator, where the bird was treated for dehydration and malnutrition and made a rapid recovery.

Endangered Species Protection

Region 8 ECOs recently conducted a unique detail in an effort to protect an endangered species while assisting local landowners with traffic and public safety issues. For years, short-eared owls have been using a Livingston County neighborhood as winter feeding grounds. The owls are easily photographed as they fly low to the ground in this picturesque area, hunting for rodents. Word spread on social media, and members of the public began showing up, parking on the road, and setting up camera tripods.

ECOs have spent time in the area over the last few weeks, speaking with numerous bird enthusiasts and educating them on the laws protecting endangered and threatened species. ECOs have also attempted to mediate the parking, traffic, and trespassing issues. Through this outreach, the officers are hopeful the owls will remain undisturbed and continue to winter in this unique area.

DEC and Volunteers Prepare for Annual Salamander and Frog Migration

Hudson Valley Volunteers to Assist Amphibians with Road Crossings during Annual Breeding Migrations

Community volunteers throughout the Hudson Valley are getting out their reflective vests, raingear, and clipboards in anticipation of annual breeding migrations of salamanders and frogs, which typically begin in mid-March, the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) announced today. The volunteers will document their observations as part of DEC's Amphibian Migrations and Road Crossings Project.

"Amphibians contribute to a healthy, functioning ecosystem and during this time of year, road mortality can pose a significant threat to our frogs, toads, and salamanders," said DEC Commissioner Basil Seggos. "DEC is grateful to the hundreds of volunteer partners that venture out each year to help protect New York's amphibians. I encourage all New Yorkers and visitors traveling the state's roads to be on the lookout for amphibians and consider working with our committed community of volunteers helping these creatures to safely cross the road."

After the ground has started to thaw in late winter and early spring, species such as spotted salamander and wood frog emerge from underground winter shelters in the forest and walk overland to woodland pools for breeding. In New York's Hudson Valley, this migration usually occurs on rainy nights from mid-March to early April, when the night air temperature is above 40 degrees Fahrenheit. When these conditions align just so, New York can experience explosive "big night" migrations, with hundreds of amphibians on the move, many having to cross roads.

Volunteers of the Amphibian Migrations and Road Crossings Project document Hudson Valley locations where migrations cross roads, record weather and traffic conditions, and identify and count the amphibians on the move. The volunteers also carefully help the amphibians to safely cross roads.

Now in its 11th year, more than 370 project volunteers have counted 20 species of amphibians and helped nearly 12,000 cross roads. Species reported most frequently during migration nights include spotted salamander, spring peeper, and wood frog. To a lesser degree, volunteers have also observed Jefferson-blue spotted salamander complex and four-toed salamander, species of greatest conservation need in New York, as well as more common species like American toad and redback salamander.

Drivers are encouraged to proceed with caution or avoid travel on the first warm, rainy evenings of the season. Amphibians come out after nightfall and are slow moving; mortality can be high even on low-traffic roads. Since the project started in 2009, volunteers have counted at least 5,700 migrating amphibians killed by passing vehicles. For more information, including a short video about amphibian migrations, visit DEC's website or contact woodlandpool@dec.ny.gov.

Project volunteers are encouraged to use the hashtag #amphibianmigrationhv in their photos and posts on social media.

Free Pheasant Rearing Opportunity for Youth

SULLIVAN COUNTY, NY- Daily care is necessary to monitor the health of young pheasants and to ensure that there is adequate feed and water for the rapidly growing chicks. Youth interested in participating in the annual Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC)'s Day-Old Pheasant "Raise & Release" program have the unique opportunity to experience rearing pheasants and releasing them into the wild.

The rearing of pheasants requires a great deal of responsibility by youth and a substantial time commitment. The benefits of this program include:

- Rearing pheasants is enjoyable, challenging, and teaches youth responsible behavior
- Released pheasants offer fall hunting opportunities
- People enjoy seeing and hearing pheasants

Orders can be placed until Wednesday, March 20, 2019 through Cornell Cooperative Extension Sullivan County (CCESC)'s 4-H Youth Development program, located at the Extension Education Center on 64 Ferndale-Loomis Road in Liberty.

For more information on the Day-Old Pheasant Chick Program or to register for chicks, the public should contact Barbara Moran at bjm292@cornell.edu or call 845-292-6180.

When the program started in the early 1900s, pheasant eggs and chicks were distributed to farmers and rural youth. Today, day-old chicks are available at no cost to participants who are able to provide a brooding facility, a covered outdoor rearing pen, and an adequate release site. According to the DEC, without propagation and release programs of this introduced species, wild populations of this introduced species would vanish and hunting opportunities would not exist in New York State.

The program is funded through the state Conservation Fund from license fees paid by hunters, trappers, and anglers. More information is available on the DEC website at <http://www.dec.ny.gov/animals/7271.html>.

Any Sullivan County youth ages 5-18 can apply to enroll in 4-H for free, all year long. To learn more about 4-H, call CCESC at 845-292-6180 or visit <http://sullivancee.org/4-h-youth-development>.
